

I CLAIM:

1. A protection hood structure for radiators of automobile comprising a plurality of hollow protection ribs, characterized in that the two ends of the hollow protection rib are mounted with plastic pad, and
5 the appropriate positions on the protection ribs are welded with vertical supporting protection ribs.
2. The protection hood structure of claim 1, wherein the vertical protection rib is provided with screwing elements so that the protection hood is installed onto the body of the automobile.